Tim Cook
The Day

Fiddling around on the USS Providence

The crew of the Groton-based sub USS Providence had just launched its first missile strike against Iraq, and crewmen nervously had returned to their regular duties. It was in these moments of calm between the storms that one might find Machinist Mate 1st Curtis Hormel in the torpedo room practicing his fiddle.

This was one of the more unusual sights on board the Providence. First of all, the crew members do not have a lot of free time. The hours between watches are filled with studying, doing laundry, washing, eating, sleeping — sometimes several of these at once. There's not a lot of time to practice a musical instrument.

Hormel said he hopes to become proficient at playing bluegrass and country folk on his fiddle some day. Until then, he can be found practicing between Tomahawk cruise missiles and torpedoes in the torpedo room of the USS Providence, awaiting the next strike.
